directors' note

A scary story is best heard by the shadows of flickering candlelight. The smallest rattle in the darkness and our imagination begins to churn...

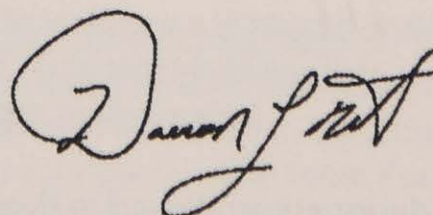

In the golden age of radio, millions of listeners gathered each week around crystal radio sets and allowed words and some well placed sound effects to open up their imaginations to peer into the heart of darkness. In 2000, while working on a play about Orson Welles, SITI Company became fascinated with radio plays. We decided to stage War of the Worlds—The Radio Play, adapted from the novella of H. G. Wells by Howard Koch and rendered unforgettable by Orson Welles and his Mercury Theater on the Air's radio broadcast in the fall of 1938. What began as a pastime turned out to be one of our most popular touring productions. And it also inspired the creation of Radio Macbeth.

Shakespeare's Scottish play is known for its spectacle, mysticism and powerful incantations, sending shivers down the spine by mere mention of its title. It is also the ultimate ghost story, weaving an aural spell much like those chilling radio plays. "From whence is that knocking?" Macbeth asks us while hiding in the shadows, his hands still bloody with murder. We want our production to bring the audience close to the heartbeat of the play by stripping it bare to the words and the relationships.

For the first time—in the very season of Halloween and All Saints—we are delighted to bring the seemingly unstoppable trajectories of both Radio Macbeth and War of the Worlds –The Radio Play to cast a spell that summons the audience's vivid imagination.
