

the lantern

HOME |
 CAMPUS |
 SPORTS |
 A+E |
 OPINION |
 MULTIMEDIA |
 LANTERN TV |
 SPECIAL REPORTS |
 CLASSIFIEDS |
 PRINT EDITION

Home » A+E » Distinguished art professor and theater ensemble tear down theater walls

Distinguished art professor and theater ensemble tear down theater walls

By McKenzie Merriman: merriman.64@osu.edu | April 21, 2015 | 0

Anne Bogart (left) and Ann Hamilton
 Credit: Courtesy of Katie Spengler

One by one, nine performers enter the stage of Merston Auditorium, independently performing various acts, including monologues and pantomimes. Ultimately, they come together, and through constant, fluid movement, unravel a long, thin sheet of cloth. They read aloud an excerpt from Virginia Woolf's stream-of-consciousness novel "To the Lighthouse." The group recites the lines from the sheet, at times their voices rising together as a group, and then at times speaking independently.

After the scene came to an end, the actors gathered, breathing heavily from the intense rehearsal.

Anne Bogart, one of the co-artistic directors of SIT1, addressed the performers.

"That was stunning," Bogart said. "That was the piece in a different shape."

From there, members of the group discussed how they think the rehearsal went.

Starting Thursday, Merston Auditorium will house a sold-out run of "the theater is a blank page" through Sunday.

"Everyone has a voice," SIT1 co-artistic director Leon Ingulsrud said of the project.

"We're all artists and we all have specific feelings and opinions about almost every detail, but what we work towards is a shared vision that isn't the least common denominator of all the thoughts in the room — or the result of whoever is loudest."

SIT1 Theater Company is ensemble-based, and has brought artistic collaborations to the Wexner Center for the Arts since 1996.

"Theater is a blank page" is also a collaboration between SIT1 and Ann Hamilton, an installation artist and a distinguished university professor in Ohio State's Department of Art. The combined efforts and expertise of Hamilton and Bogart began in 2012 with Hamilton's piece "the event of a thread," which incorporated SIT1 performers into a room-sized installation piece.

Together, Hamilton and SIT1 have put together "the theater is a blank page," which blends and bends theater and visual art.

CAMPUS NEWS

Kappa Kappa Gamma suspended after hazing incident

April 21, 2015

2nd finalist for marching band director drops out

April 21, 2015

Sonar treadmill could replace 'dreadmill'

April 21, 2015

Ohio State programs target
 at-risk students

April 21, 2015

Kidnapping reported on South Campus, no public safety notice issued

April 20, 2015

Students envision new way to recycle cellphones

April 19, 2015

How do women employees
 stack up at Ohio State?

April 19, 2015

SHADES allows LGBTQ students of color to meet, discuss issues

April 19, 2015

ARTS

Distinguished art professor and theater ensemble tear down theater walls

April 21, 2015

Opinion: Learning to control your procrastination starts with small steps

April 21, 2015

Opinion: Dr. Oz is a smooth-talker, beloved TV doctor and alleged charlatan

April 20, 2015

Knowlton Hall becomes stage for chamber music quartet

April 20, 2015

Concert review: Big Sean shows his genuine love for the people of Columbus

April 20, 2015

Soda pub aims to be a

@THELANTERN

Sonar treadmill could replace 'dreadmill'
<http://t.co/SxeZVzVfBf>

Urban Meyer won't rely on 'gut feeling' choose Ohio State's starting quarterback
<http://t.co/P9VlaOTgPh>

2nd finalist for marching band director
<http://t.co/M5zfQLP2IU>

Opinion: Dr. Oz is a smooth-talker, beloved doctor and alleged charlatan
<http://t.co/bKdLeSvFd4>

LANTERN TV

Buckeye News Update: OSU fo sets spring game attendance re
 April 20, 2015

2015 Ohio State Spring Game I
 April 19, 2015

Chalk Talk Extra: Spring Game
 April 17, 2015

The Scarlet Scoop: Holocaust remembered on the oval
 April 17, 2015

Buckeye News Now: Abortion r
 Oval sparks debate
 April 16, 2015

RECENT POSTS

Ohio State baseball takes out M
 State, 6-3
 April 21, 2015

Kappa Kappa Gamma suspended after hazi
 incident
 April 21, 2015

An example of how the text is incorporated into the performance.
Credit: Courtesy of SITI Company

The title of the work comes from the intent to illuminate contrasting qualities that co-exist in both literature and theater. In Hamilton's view, both media are united in their ability to suspend the belief of the audience, which simultaneously remains aware of the work's duplicity.

Though Hamilton has had performance elements in her installation work in the past, this is the closest she's drifted to pure theater.

"Although the architecture of the theater and the relationship of the auditorium to the stage are different conditions than those found in a museum gallery, in many ways my approach is the same," Hamilton said of her experience as a visual artist working on a theater piece.

"I am responding to the volume, the objects and systems in the space and the unique opportunities ... The time structure of a theater production is a major difference between the gallery and the theater. The nuance of the arc of shaping time is something I am learning in the collaborative conversation with everyone on the project."

The audience at each performance will walk throughout Mershon Auditorium during the piece, its journey led by OSU MFA students, eventually entering the stage and actually traveling into the production.

As the audience becomes more immersed in the performance, SITI and the performers hope to encourage a shift in perspective for those experiencing the piece.

"I think the deep theme of a work like this is that there is a simple joy and profound beauty in the world all around us," Ingulsrud said. "All day, every day, we walk past things, which if we stop and look at them, or change our viewpoint just a little bit, they are full of wonder and life and beauty."

In many ways, the piece orbits around the act of reading, specifically Woolf's "To The Lighthouse." The cast and audience members — who will receive some of the text beforehand — engage in the text together, exploring how reading text connects and affects people in a group.

"The act of reading always threads the near-at-hand of the book with the far away that is contained in the book itself," Hamilton said. "We spend so much of our time in solitary and silent reading, we hope the project offers this as a shared experience."

Tweet 5 Likes 14 +1 0

Previous: Opinion: Learning to control your procrastination starts with small steps

Next: Sonar treadmill could replace 'dreadmill'

RELATED POSTS

Kappa Kappa Gamma suspended after hazing incident

April 21, 2015

Urban Meyer won't rely on 'gut feeling' to choose Ohio State's starting quarterback

April 21, 2015

Opinion: Ohio State quarterback battle should be a two horse race

April 21, 2015

Sonar treadmill could replace 'dreadmill'

April 21, 2015

Barack Obama welcomes 'extraordinary' Ohio State football team to White House

April 20, 2015

Parris Campbell among young players to catch Urban Meyer's eye at Ohio State Spring Game

April 20, 2015

'rambling house'

April 19, 2015

It's lights out for Columbus band City Lights after final show

April 19, 2015

SPORTS

Ohio State baseball takes out Morehead State, 6-3

April 21, 2015

Urban Meyer won't rely on 'gut feeling' to choose Ohio State's starting quarterback

April 21, 2015

Opinion: Ohio State quarterback battle should be a two horse race

April 21, 2015

Barack Obama welcomes 'extraordinary' Ohio State football team to White House

April 20, 2015

Parris Campbell among young players to catch Urban Meyer's eye at Ohio State Spring Game

April 20, 2015

Ohio State baseball set for matchup with Morehead State

April 20, 2015

Ohio State 'not a good team' at Spring Game

April 19, 2015

OPINION

Opinion: Protests only one side of a complicated story

April 19, 2015

Opinion: Anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's death a time for reflection

April 16, 2015

Letter to the editor: Lantern article's reporting did not show objectivity

April 16, 2015

Opinion: Cancer shouldn't define or overshadow loved ones

April 13, 2015

Opinion: For more everyday significance, title your days

April 13, 2015

Letter from the editor: Seeking feedback about our new website

April 12, 2015

Opinion: 'Rolling Stone' feature must be a lesson in journalism

April 9, 2015

2nd finalist for marching band drops out

April 21, 2015

Urban Meyer won't rely on 'gut' to choose Ohio State's starting quarterback

April 21, 2015

Opinion: Ohio State quarterback should be a two horse race

April 21, 2015

FIND US ON FACEBOOK

The Lantern

7,890 people like The Lantern.

Facebook social plugin